Provider Profile

Justice Resource Institute (JRI), a 501c3 charitable corporation, was founded in 1973 with the mission of working as a partner of government to address the more complex and resistant problems affecting individuals, families, and communities. The young leaders who started JRI saw, in the deinstitutionalization movement a disjuncture between the specific charters of existing voluntary agencies and the transformed role of government. Whereas government was moving to purchase the full range of services previously operated directly, specific charters did not, in combination, embrace the full range and diversity of need becoming the responsibility of the non-for-profit sector.

The philosophy of JRI derives directly from its mission. We believe that in order to meaningfully participate in family and community, an individual must receive individualized, quality service designed specifically to address his/her unique needs. As a result, JRI has developed a considerable range of services addressing populations most at risk of not receiving appropriate services and most likely to experience dire results for self and others if not properly served.

JRI has deep experience, and our work is excellent and cutting edge. We now operate at more than sixty sites in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and Pennsylvania. Programs include six residential schools for mentally ill, behaviorally challenging youth, one residential school for severely developmentally disabled, medically involved, intensive residential treatment programs, a day school for learning disabled youth, forensic court clinics, forensic adult group homes, outpatient mental health centers, services for GLBT youth and adults here and in South Africa, a twenty-two site residential, day, and employment service for individuals with developmental disabilities, secure care for mentally ill, community based therapeutic services for youth with serious emotional disabilities, care coordination services for the SE region of DCF Massachusetts, transitional group homes, and trauma services.
